mom-to-be's Birthing Adventure

As mom-to-be's due date approached, she could feel herself becoming more and more adjective. There was so much that still had to be done! The best part of preparing for the new baby was decorating the place in a home. She could picture it perfectly: Colorful plural noun hanging from the ceiling, a noun set up in the corner, and of course, plenty of plural noun. She knew just how important it was to stock up on those!

One day, right after she returned from the type of store where she was buying more plural noun, she felt a sudden pain near her body part. It must be time! She immediately contacted father-to-be, then sat down to wait for a ride to place. To calm her nerves while she waited, she indulged herself in a bit of verb ending in "ing".

Soon, father-to-be arrived and they were off! So excited were they to get there quickly that he stuck his body part out of the car window and waved it the entire way! The effort worked -- surprised drivers got out of their way and the two arrived at location in record time.

Upon arrival, she was so ready to deliver that she couldn't even present tense verb -- her contractions were that strong already! To make her feel better, father-to-be spent a few minutes verb ending in "ing" but the distraction wasn't enough. After number minutes of waiting, she was whisked away to place and prepared for delivery.

The professional arrived in the nick of time -- whenever she present tense verb, you could practically see the baby's body part! Already number centimeters dilated, the professional suggested that she try verb ending in "ing" a few times. Thankfully, she was able to focus enough to successfully verb and soon you could see a little body part peeking out! After only number more pushes, the baby was born.

A chorus of loud plural sound was heard throughout the maternity ward. Little baby's name was perfect! He/she weighed number pounds and number ounces, and measured number inches long. What's more, the little one even had number body part! The baby was checked and gently wrapped in a noun, then given to the beaming parents to admire.
